Two Olympic Disciplines

To live the dream every four years

Canoe Sprint previously known as Flatwater. It's the traditional and authentic face of canoeing. But it has kept its elegant and powerful style throughout the years. The discipline is a race of nine boats with one or more persons inside. The rules are simple: the first who passes the finish line wins.

Paracanoe (Canoe Sprint) gives opportunities for paddlers with physical and intellectual disabilities to participate and compete at club, national and international level. In December 2010, the International Paralympic Committee added Paracanoeing to the programme of sports for the 2016 Paralympic Games.

Canoe Slalom

This second Olympic discipline is dynamic and vibrant. In this competition the winner is the paddler who manages to navigate his boat through pairs of poles, called "gates", set up over the course. It's a very challenging sport having to navigate on rough water which means rapids, waves, eddies and currents and at the same time avoiding any poles if he/she doesn't want to receive time penalties.
